Oh Matt. Here you go again with anecdotal evidence. Let me introduce you to something called "practice effect" in AD clinical trials. Add it to your bedtime story collection.

ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/P...

Practice effects (PEs) are improvements in cognitive test performance over serial assessments attributed to repeated exposure to test stimuli or procedures. Clinically, PEs can provide valuable information about level of cognitive functioning, vis-à-vis ability to benefit from repeated exposure [1], [2]; however, in randomized controlled trials, they introduce a source of external signal that may confound observation of the target outcome [3].

If Dr Brunt doesn't want to estimate, I'd be happy to hear from some of the PhDs with short positions. How much time would it likely take for a rigorous audit of $SAVA data going back to 2005 like the CP is calling for?

Reply 4 Retweet Like 1 Share MoreLogarithmicDis @LogarithmicDis · Jan 9, 2022

1/ (I don't have a position). But the FDA and NIH audits need not go back that far. It could take at least over a year, depending on their discoveries. Plus, they may have to audit several entities (IRB, CRO, and several site locations, etc). Then we're talking a few years.

Reply 3 Retweet Like 2 Share MoreArthur Singer @sing3r · Jan 9, 2022

Isn't FDA in regular communication with this company as they are with the shorts? At a minimum shorts have called and fired off multiple addendums. Isn't SPA an open channel to allow questions to be addressed before instituting any audit? Btw- an Audit is not a Hold.

Reply 2 Retweet Like 1 Share MoreDarcy Aiken @pei_guy77 · Jan 9, 2022

I agree that an audit wouldn't require a hold. Jordan Thomas had other ideas he expressed in the 3rd supplement:

[REDACTED] Again, the Citizen's Petition [REDACTED] pause any related clinical trials, until a rigorous audit of all related Cassava clinical trial results can be conducted. With respect, the CP really is inconsequential in of itself. It's not how things are done. But what it has done is throw eyes on the issue, which has resulted in properly submitted requests for audits. This I know.

LOL, first Adrian downplays the CP and now this from @LogarithmicDis (Jesse?). The fact that you knew it was meaningless but also drove the market cap of SAVA down, absolutely proves this was a move for nothing less than to distort and short.
-  Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
The CP isn't regulatory action in itself, it's an appeal to regulators to take action. The CP filing is of no direct consequence to ongoing trials. The CP's release led to the mkt pricing in audits + potential administrative actions from FDA under 21CFR312 subpart C.
-  Jay @smogcitygiraffe · Jan 9, 2022
So in other words the point of the CP was to drop the stock price so Bredt and Pitt could recover their short losses. Thanks for clarifying Aurko.
-  Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
If you cared about AD patients, you'd understand the point of the CP was to protect patients and the sanctity of evidence based medicine. Administrative Actions and 21CFR exists for situations like $SAVA.
But you're too obsessed with your long position on SAVA to understand.
-  Jay @smogcitygiraffe · Jan 9, 2022
That's odd, if that's true where is the CP for Aduhelm which causes brain swelling and brain bleeds? No protection there Aurko? Please explain.
-  Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
Jay why aren't you more vocal $BIBL if you care about patients suffering from adverse reactions? It's almost like you only care about your stock position in $SAVA rather than about the treatments out there for AD patients.
-  Arthur Singer @sing3r · Jan 9, 2022
You said you were in it for patient safety and he said he was in it for patient benefit.... Poor logic there.
-  Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
So it looks like he doesn't care about patient safety (or benefit, based on the fact that Simufilam is inert).
Again, more proof that you guys are only in this because of stock price/greed.
-  Arthur Singer @sing3r · Jan 9, 2022
Based on the fact that you are short, you might say just about anything to hurt this company?
-  Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
You'd say anything good about $SAVA because you desperately want the stock to go up. Why aren't you $SAVA fans talking about:

 Great Alz cognition results WITH placebo. No fanfare from you + people at AD-Science. Why? bc they are greedy stock pumbers

Do you have a short position in $sava? Why do you keep attacking it non stop?

ReplyRetweetLikeShareBookmarkUpvoteArka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022

Yes I do! Because its a Special Situations investment, as its a thorough fraud. Now tell me why are incessantly pumping SAVA's stock? Its obviously because of your long position.
 Tell me why you haven't disseminated any of AriBio's P2 data that demonstrated cognitive benefit

ReplyRetweetLikeShareBookmarkUpvoteLawrence Shaw @lawrenceshaw82 · Jan 9, 2022

We looked at AriBio P2 data. It's cog data isn't statsig for the full group. The sub group analysis which hints at it needs further verification. But our time is limited. We don't work for biotech VC firms 😊. Our DD in $sava means we stick to what we researched thoroughly.

ReplyRetweetLikeShareBookmarkUpvoteArka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022

Don't believe that @ADScience4 or anyone affiliated have looked through AriBio's P2 data & meaningfully discussed it. Can you show proof of when @ADScience4 or these related blogs have talked about this potential AD therapy? Otherwise its obvious you're just greedy stock pumbers

ReplyRetweetLikeShareBookmarkUpvoteLawrence Shaw @lawrenceshaw82 · Jan 9, 2022

Nope. Our intent for the website was dedicate it to all things AD. Do you want to contribute? Happy to publish whatever you have about other promising AD companies. As long as you represent the facts accurately. @Aang02315509 FYI.

My desire is you show proof that people at @ADScience4 and other affiliated parties have meaningfully discussed (so, for longer than like 3 or 4 posts) other potential AD therapies, including non-IPO's. Or else its clear they are stock pumbers who desperately want to pump bags

There's no concerns about AR1001 being a totally inert drug with faked preclinical data, you ignored that part. You also ignored how it was blinded. But I'm glad that you are no longer focused on just PTI-125 to pump your bags. You're learning! Maybe you can wait for their IPO.

You aren't very smart if you don't think their p2 "sub group" analysis of patients not taking aricept (weird exclusion without proven cross interactions with the drug) is not the very definition of p-hacking. Simpson's paradox and confounders galore. Actually CP needed for that.

Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
Perhaps @ADScience4 can talk about this instance of potential p-hacking/shady "sub group analysis" of non-donepezil subjects? Wouldn't it be good for an Alzheimer's blog to talk about something other than \$SAVA for once rather than incessantly pumping a stock?

1 reply · 1 retweet · 1 like · 1 share · 1 link

Don't want to contribute to an ostensible Alzheimers blog that I currently believe is full of bad faith stock pumpers who will go out of their way to put \$SAVA on a pedestal rather than actually care about Alz therapy and Alz patients. Prove they aren't bad faith stock pumpers.

Then STFU and let the blog focus on one promising AD drug at a time. 🤦

Arka @arkabagchi24 · Jan 9, 2022
Seriously? Your way of explaining away blatant stock pumping is "let us focus on ONE drug at a time".

You are so obviously lying. You are conveniently focusing on "one drug at a time" only because that drug happens to belong to a company whose stock you are bagholding.
